After 20 Years, President Sue Marsh Steps Down

BOSTON, MA-- After twenty years leading Rosie's Place, a sanctuary for poor and homeless women, president Sue Marsh recently informed the board she will be stepping down in February 2019. During her tenure, Rosie's Place has expanded the wide array of advocacy, education, housing and support services it offers women across greater Boston, all while continuing its policy of not accepting government funds and maintaining its focus on treating women with dignity and respect.

The Board of Directors has expressed its gratitude to Sue for not only her many years of outstanding leadership, but her continued passion for the mission of Rosie's Place. A search for her successor is formally underway.

About Rosie's Place

Rosie's Place's mission is to provide a safe and nurturing environment that helps poor and homeless women maintain their dignity, seek opportunity and find security in their lives. Rosie's Place relies solely on the generous support of individuals, foundations and corporations and does not accept any city, state or federal funding. Thanks to these donations, 85 cents of every dollar raised goes directly to services for poor and homeless women. Additional information is available at www.rosiesplace.org.
